Questioning of potential jurors in the capital murder trial of David Wayne Spence continued Thursday, but none of the four people questioned was selected.

Thursday was the first day no jurors were chosen since jury selection began May 23.

Because proceedings have slowed, Judge George Allen of 54th District Court said he intends to start limiting questions.

Court-appointed defense attorneys Russ Hunt and Hayes Fuller and prosecutors Vic Feazell and Ned Butler spent three hours Thursday questioning a 61-year-old housewife, who was struck by the state.

A pregnant woman was dismissed for health reasons, and two other people were dismissed for cause.

The seven jurors already selected include a 63-year-old Baylor University psychology professor; a 21-year-old substitute teacher; a 35-year-old staff recruiter at Texas State Technical Institute; a 58-year-old registered nurse at the Waco Veterans Administration Medical Center; a 47-year-old Hewitt city secretary; a 58-year-old retired U.S. Air Force major; and a 27-year-old credit manager at Nash-Robinson & Co. Wholesalers.

Spence is charged with capital murder in the stabbing deaths of three teen-agers.
