Show questions district attorney, victim's mother

"Sixty Minutes" newsman Harry Reasoner interviewed Vic Fezell this week in Waco.

Also interviewed for the story was Nancy Shaw, the mother of one of the three teenagers stabbed to death at Lake Waco in 1982. Fezell was the chief prosecutor in the Lake Waco cases. Shaw told the Waco Tribune Herald that Reasoner interviewed her for two hours Monday. She also said Reasoner told her the Fezell story would probably air before the end of this year.

"I can't talk about a story that I'm working on, although you can probably guess why I'm here," Reasoner said when he was interviewed earlier this week for another story. He said it is a company policy not to divulge information about a story currently being investigated.
